Anita Amstutz describes Soul Tending as a spiritual biography. It is “a story of my own wrestling with balance in my work life...how I found the Sabbath welcome of ‘ceasing work’ to be a solace in that dry, droughty space between creativity and overwork/soul weariness”. We live in hungry times of economic uncertainty, fear, violence, division, and social chaos. What is needed for times such as these is a heart full of courage and wisdom grounded in compassion and resilience and recovering a slower rhythm in today’s world.
